

HON. JEROME M. BECKER

Former Chairman, New York State Housing Finance Agency

Hon. Jerome M. Becker has had a remarkable career with service in the court system, in the private sector, and in government. He has been a mediator and arbitrator with National Arbitration and Mediation since 2008 specializing in high-stakes dispute resolution. For over a decade, Judge Becker served as Chairman of the New York State Housing Finance Agency (“HFA”) in addition to other financing authorities. The mission of HFA was to preserve existing housing and create mechanisms for the production of new units. With the proceeds of taxable and tax-exempt bonds and low income tax credits, the HFA provided financing for its many programs, including the highly successful 80/20 program. Under that program, the landscape of New York City was virtually changed by the construction of many new apartment towers as a result of developers receiving low-cost financing from the sale of tax-exempt bonds in return for setting aside at least 20% of the apartments for low-income families.

During this time when Judge Becker managed the HFA, billions of dollars worth of bonds were issued, leading to the construction of thousands of apartment units for New Yorkers. He had a fiduciary responsibility to personally account for the financing on multiple development projects in terms of contract compliance across the board. As a result of Judge Becker’s keen understanding of financing coupled with his experience as an attorney in real estate matters for over three decades led to his appointment by the New York State Supreme Court, on numerous occasions, as a Mediator in complex commercial disputes.

As a mediator in the NY Supreme Court, Judge Becker presided over a wide variety of matters. Some representative cases include a dispute over the construction of steel staircases in a NYC subway station; a case involving the modernization of a major retail space on Madison Avenue; a dispute involving defective dry walls, warped floors and inadequate central air in a major condominium complex; and a dispute over the renovation of a medical teaching facility.

Judge Becker is considered to be an authority in construction law. His deep industry knowledge and business experience is invaluable to clients in structuring acceptable settlements to complex matters. As a mediator and arbitrator with NAM, he has addressed development issues involving failure to pay performance bonds, contractors abandoning work, design defects, changes to design, delays and environmental concerns. He has also presided over a myriad of complex construction defect cases involving alleged cost overruns in new residential towers, in a 100-year old condominium complex spanning a city block, and in a museum involving the installation of a steel beam/structure. He also has expertise in complex labor law cases involving falls from scaffolding, ladders, and significant heights. He has mediated and/or arbitrated cases involving the NY Labor Law code, and common-law negligence.
